BRAC 2005

Those focused on BRAC initiatives face many challenges, including the need to facilitate collaboration across multiple jurisdictions; collect, organize and disperse information to diverse stakeholder groups; and educate and engage the community.

Military base retention and reuse is about CHANGE.

How can the change work best for your community?

The IBM - Neighborhood America Public Comment® Service

enables working teams to:

- Maximize retention efforts and proactively mount coordinated strategies targeted to manage base closure or realignment
- Accurately value base assets through shared knowledge and information
- Develop informed alternative strategies for land reuse, in case of base closure

Benefits

- Enable proactive outreach and education on critical project information
- Securely manage communication and information
- Easily collaborate among public and private officials, stakeholders, project team members and citizens
- Maintain a central repository of project data with 24/7 accessibility
- Minimize paperwork and reduce administration time and costs
